

YOU TALKIN' TO ME?

Establishing Board-Staff Leadership Teams That Work

Developing and maintaining effective relationships between the Board, Chief Executive and senior staff is among the most important and difficult tasks that leaders face.

The variety and ever-changing nature of personal, political and organizational dynamics can challenge even the most experienced leader. Leaders must have a sound personal foundation as well as effective organizational and governance systems in place to achieve team cohesion. This workshop explores the challenges that face leadership teams, the importance of role definition, the use of governance models, and the approaches that both administrators and board members can employ to address team dysfunction.

Craig Rapp is a nationally known speaker and consultant. He has been a City Manager, an executive in two privately held companies, senior executive at a Regional Planning Council, the Director of Consulting for an International Association—and he has trained and performed Improv at The Second City in Chicago.

Craig offers other workshops including, 'Improv and Improve!', 'Refresh, Reboot or Reinvent?', 'Achieving Excellence: The Quest for a High Performance Organization' and many more.

Go to craigrapp.com for more information.